Introduction to the Assignment

Forever 21, Inc. has chosen PROvoke Advertising’s creative team to demonstrate their talents by creating exceptional creative executions that will be sure to provide results. Forever 21, Inc. has been working with PROvoke Advertising since January 2011. Until now, Forever 21 has not done any qualitative or quantitative research on the target market. The purpose of this assignment is to utilize PROvoke Advertising’s key findings in order to generate a meaningful and effective advertising campaign. The goal is to create a positive and memorable relationship with the target market.
Methodology

PROvoke Advertising used quantitative and qualitative research to understand the fashion retail category, Forever 21 and its competitors. Each research method was developed to specifically understand the consumer on an intimate level.

First, quantitative research was conducted to measure awareness, attitudes and usage of Forever 21 and its competitors. To better understand the consumer’s perceptions and preferences, PROvoke administered a focus group to gain qualitative research from the target market.

*Note: The qualitative research questionnaire, quantitative research discussion guide and projective techniques can be found in the Appendix section.

Quantitative Research Methodology

The online survey, generated through SurveyMonkey, was conducted from March 10\textsuperscript{th} – 14\textsuperscript{th}, 2011. The general sample consisted of females aged 18-34, Caucasian with a HHI of less than $20,000.

Sample size:
• (n = 125)

Demographic breakdown:
• Age: (n = 120)
  Younger than 18: (n = 0)
  18-34 years of age: (n = 101)
  35-44 years of age: (n = 5)
  45-54 years of age: (n = 11)

  Other/Multiple Classifications: (n = 2)
  Prefer not to answer: (n = 2)
Qualitative Research Methodology

PROvoke Advertising held a focus group consisting of eight female participants between the ages of 19 and 23. The focus group was held in order to gain insights into the attitudes, awareness and usage of Forever 21 consumers.

- 1 focus group in Morgantown, WV in the WVU Mountainlair
- Focus group lasted approximately 2 hours

Group Composition:
- Group consisted of current Forever 21 customers
- Recruited 10, sat 8

Demographics:
- Females
- Mix of ages between 19 and 23
- Income:
  - Less than or equal to $20,000
- Ethnicity: Caucasian
The Consumer and Fashion Retail

PROvoke Advertising has recognized that fashion is not just for women anymore. It is becoming increasingly popular in today’s culture with both the male and female demographic. Though Forever 21 has three target markets, the following is broken down into the primary audience, women aged 18-34.

Primary Target Audience

Demographics
- Gender: Female
- Age: 18-34
- Education: In College/Completed
- HHI: $75,000+

Psychographics
The primary target consists of highly fashionable women on a lower budget. They are motivated by the trendy, fashionable and frequently changing clothing styles on the market. These women want runway looks for a reasonable price. They also like the idea of “disposable” clothing that makes it possible for a woman to outfit herself for a party one week, and then come back the following week to find something completely new and hip to wear and still have enough cash left over to treat herself to lunch or the latest CD.\(^1\)

These women are extremely savvy shoppers, 46% say they usually buy average quality items to save money. They like to stay informed, connected, and entertained. It is also important to engage these women on a personal level. They like to feel productive and also have opportunities to share special moments with people they care about.\(^2\)

Current trends

Many current junior clothing stores such as Forever 21, Inc., H&M, as well as Charlotte Russe are focusing their efforts on bringing designer runway looks and knockoffs into their stores for the cheapest possible price. These kinds of clothes are usually considered “disposable”. This means that they are inexpensive clothes that are usually only worn as long as that particular trend is in style. This industry changes so rapidly that designer trends never last for more than a few months. Therefore, teens as well as young adults are constantly updating their closets with upcoming trends every few months with the changing of each season. Stores are also stocking up with as much inventory as possible to cater to all types of trends and styles. These stores have also realized that their young customers cannot afford to keep revamping their style unless these trends are made more affordable. The fabrics and designs used are extremely similar to designer collections in look, but not in price or quality.³

Future trends

With the push for designer trends at a lower price, we will also start to see these types of stores catering to a larger audience. Forever 21, Inc. has a small, not very well-known, men’s line of clothing that has a lot of potential to grow. They launched a brand called “21Men” hoping to grab young men that also enjoy following designer trends for a cheaper price. Charlotte Russe, and Wet Seal are two stores that currently only have women’s clothing lines and could carry men’s lines in the future to create more profit.⁴

Social factors

A huge social factor currently affecting the industry is sizing. There has been a recent surge in incorporating plus sizes into stores. Stores are trying to give “plus-size” women a chance to share in the same trends and designs as average sized women. Clothing retailers are noticing the sales potential in this audience considering that two-thirds of the female population is considered overweight. These women are currently limited to only specialty stores such as Lane Bryant and Torrid. Torrid, which is owned by Hot Topic, had a double-digit growth in its online sales. Retailers carrying sizes 14 and up have seen huge growth in the company.⁵

The Consumer and Forever 21

MRI Data
According to MRI+ data, Forever 21’s primary target market is females aged 18-34, Caucasian with a household income of $75,000+; the females have either completed college or currently enrolled.

Quantitative Research Key Findings
From the results gathered, we can conclude that the average Forever 21 consumer is between the ages of 18-34 and female. This type of person is very aware of the brand, despite the lack of advertising awareness, and enjoys its affordability, quality and style. They shop often and are not concerned with the low rated quality of Forever 21’s products because they are considered “disposable”. This type of young female also considers shopping at Forever 21 over their main competitors and would recommend the brand to a friend. Our typical consumer enjoys the cheap trendy items Forever 21 has to offer, and is a loyal customer.

Most men surveyed were unaware of the 21Men clothing line, but would consider purchasing this line from Forever 21 in the future.

Qualitative Research Key Findings
PROvoke Advertising used an online survey to perform a benchmark study for the Forever 21 brand. The results yielded a plethora of useful results. Respondents tended to favor Forever 21 compared to the key competitors. Awareness was high and perceptions were positive, although none of the respondents were able to recall any Forever 21 advertisements.

Usage
- Respondents favored Forever 21 as their first choice when shopping for clothing.
- Respondents visit the store often, sometimes even weekly to find updated stock.

Awareness
- Some respondents were aware of Maternity line. They were surprisingly positive about the line being marketed toward a young demographic, stating that it’s good for lower income, young expecting mothers.
- Most respondents were aware of plus size line, as well as the 21Men.
- Respondents noticed the increase in non-apparel merchandise sold by Forever 21. This indicates that consumers are recognizing the transition into a department store.
Perceptions/Attitudes

- Respondents felt that Forever 21 has more variety and merchandise than competitors. Clothing is cheap, trendy and in-style.
- First and most important factor for all respondents when choosing a fashion retailer to shop was price.
- Respondents stated that they would recommend the store, but did not feel that it was necessary. The reason being was that their friends are already aware and current Forever 21 consumers.

Advertising/Marketing

- None of the respondents were aware of Forever 21 advertisements outside of in-house marketing (i.e. direct email).
- Respondents were only aware of H&M advertising; they recalled print and television ads.
- Respondents that receive Forever 21 direct emails expressed that they do not find the content effective in influencing their purchases. They stated that the emails were too frequent and did not contain a significant special or offer to persuade a purchase.

Projective Exercise

Consistent themes among collages:

- Floral designs
- Words describing low costs and bargains
- Words pertaining to style or fashion
- Words associated with “new,” and “current”
- Words such as “sexy,” “pretty,” and “hot”
- Images of accessories
- Bright colors (images and words)
- Overall theme is fun, energetic and feminine
Current communications/advertising in Fashion Retail

Forever 21
Forever 21 currently places advertisements in big markets, such as New York; in February 2010, they placed an interactive billboard in Times Square to engage people passing by their store.6 Kendall Jenner, a sister to the popular reality Kardashian’s, was featured in a recent print ad campaign.7 They also use Twitter, Facebook and a blog – “The Skinny,” to interact with social media users. To increase their mobile presence, they created a mobile application.

Forever 21 also uses a direct e-mail system to communicate with its consumers. However, according to the qualitative research results their consumers find it ineffective in influencing their purchasing habits.

Wet Seal
Wet Seal has an interactive web experience. They have an iPhone application that acts like a personal stylist, a Facebook page, YouTube channel, and MySpace page. On the Wet Seal website, users can listen to and purchase popular songs from the Wet Seal playlist. By linking up through Facebook, they can also shop with friends virtually by using the Facebook chat feature. Wet Seal saw a decline in sales and stopped its national print advertising campaign in 2008 in an effort to save $1.4 million. However, they operate a strong online presence that incorporates their Website and social media Websites.8

H&M
They have a substantial online presence. On their Web site, they have a “social media room” that displays Facebook updates, Twitter posts, YouTube uploads, blog posts, and lookbook.nu post in one convenient list. The company also has an iPhone application that customers can use to receive promotions, view new collections, and find the closest store. H&M does not currently offer online shopping in the United States. H&M’s business strategy is “fashion and quality at the best price.” They use advertising to deliver this message to several markets throughout the year. All advertisements show that season’s styles and the price of the items pictured.9

Charlotte Russe
Charlotte Russe uses its website and other social media websites to promote its brand. They use their Facebook and Twitter profiles to promote sales and to give away prizes.\(^\text{10}\)

---

Perceptual Map
The following perceptual map demonstrates the perceptions consumers have toward Forever 21 and its competitors. Through qualitative research we discovered that in general Forever 21 is perceived as the highest fashion at the lowest price, while H&M is considered somewhat fashionable at a higher price. Charlotte Russe and Wet Seal were less desirable in fashion and lower in price, according to consumers.

Opportunities/Issues for Forever 21

Forever 21, Inc. runs in a highly competitive apparel market. The company competes with other small brick-and-mortar retailers such as H&M, Wet Seal and Charlotte Russe. These retailers also offer trendy merchandise at highly competitive prices that pose a direct threat to Forever 21’s market share.

Although Forever 21, Inc. has approximately 495 brick-and-mortar stores, accessibility to their stores could affect their profits, as well as awareness. Advertising is particularly weak in small markets, and the advertising that is produced only includes young women. Therefore, there is low awareness for the men’s, maternity and girl’s clothing lines.

High profile fashion designers and the Fashion Designers of America are lobbying to enact the Design Piracy Prohibition Act (DPPA). The DPPA, if passed, would extend the copyright protection of fashion designs for a three-year period. Forever 21’s current business model could be greatly affected if the DPPA is passed; new innovative fashions will have to be developed instead of copying expensive designs. Weather conditions have the potential to affect cotton supply, if extreme weather affected the cotton supply, Forever 21, Inc. would be forced to raise prices.

Opportunities

- Growth in online retail spending
- Expansion toward department store
- Expand awareness of men’s, maternity and girl’s lines
- Offer a loyalty program
- Revamp direct e-mail communications
- Create memorable advertising campaign

Issues

- Weather affecting cotton supply
- Copyright lawsuits
- Accessibility to brick-and-mortar stores
- Awareness of men’s, maternity and girl’s lines
- Advertising is not all inclusive of offered lines
- Weak advertising in smaller markets
- Quality and durability of fabric
- Direct e-mail is ineffective

Brand Vision Statement

Core Identity
- Brand Soul
  A fashion retailer that offers top fashion for low prices
- Band Values
  Style, inexpensive, fun
- Point of Difference
  Forever 21 gives young women the chance to look like an heiress on a college student budget. The customer enjoys the quantity of apparel over quality. She can pitch her new outfit at the end of the season (without getting her inexpensive panties in a bunch) because she paid so little for the clothing.

Extended Identity
- Personality
  Forever is a college aged woman with little money and a lot of style. She wants to look good but doesn’t want to spend a lot of money doing it. She is a good student and holds down a part time job while going to school. She is a social butterfly and likes to party with friends on the weekend. She is the life of the party and her style changes with the seasons.

- Brand Positioning
  The “cheap-chic” fashion retailer

Consumer Relationship
- Functional Benefits
  The customer is getting trendy clothing for a low price.

- Emotional Benefits
  The customer feels like the store is looking out for them by providing low-cost clothing.

- Consumer/Brand Relationship
  The customer feels loyal to Forever21 because of the past deals and service.
The snapshot

Forever 21 is a fashion retailer known for its highly fashionable clothing at low prices; the merchandise changes frequently, giving females a reason to indulge in shopping routinely. To create a stronger brand relationship with its target market, Forever 21 wants to create a campaign that will resonate with the fashion savvy, female consumer.

What is the purpose of the communication?

Build a stronger relationship with the female consumer that will create awareness, drive repeat purchases and a personal experience with the brand’s personality and soul.

Who is the target audience?

Forever Fashionably Frugal Females aged 18-34, Caucasian with a HHI of $75,000+. These savvy fashionistas have a desire to keep up with the current trends, but wish to stay on a budget to indulge in their social affairs.

What is the opportunity to activate the target?

This is a store that provides a style for every aspect of their chameleon-like lifestyle.

What is the prevailing tension we need to confront?

Quality of clothing needs to be related to the chameleon-like lifestyle to enforce that it’s okay to be “disposable.”

What is the key insight that will unleash the brand potential?

To Forever Fashionable Frugal Females, quality takes a backseat in their Kia Soul, price always calls, “Shot-gun!”

What is the idea that will create action?

Forever 21’s clothing may not last forever, but the memories made while wearing them will last a lifetime.

Forever 21 jeans, $20...Night out, $30... the memories you created when you fell down the stairs after Black Out Tuesday at Bent Willey’s and ruined the jeans? Worth every penny!
What are the reasons to act now?

- Current trends
- Recession friendly fashion
- Designer looks: student friendly budget
- Sexy not skanky
- Youthful styles
- Online shopping

What are the executional considerations?

Target market is young and multi-taskers, they are easily bored by less than stellar advertisements or marketing; therefore, the campaign must be memorable and engage females on a personal level.
